Diversity and Inclusion at Work Toolkit

•Discrimination at work•Educating yourself about diversity and supporting others•Age•Different abilities•LGBTQ•Race

Everyone has a right to go to work in a safe, inclusive environment where they are valued for their skills, creativity, and work ethic regardless of their race, religion, sex, sexuality, gender identity, age, or physical or cognitive ability.

However, whether you are a manager or team member, it is not enough to simply state that your workplace is diverse and inclusive. You must listen to others who may be different to you, find out about their experiences, and take the important step to actively support creating a welcoming workplace.

This toolkit has resources that will help you understand how to begin the process of making your workplace more inclusive, while also standing up to racism, sexism, homophobia, ageism, and ableism.
